Requirements for Early Childhood
Teacher Education Program

Philosophy

A course dedicated to preparing adult learners must have as its guiding values the fundamental principles upon which Dr. Maria Montessori based her philosophy. The same principles that pertain to children's education need to be applied, whenever possible, to adults. By adhering to the same philosophy with our adult learners, students who take our course will develop a love for the Montessori principles and philosophy that will continue long past the completion of their credential.

We will apply the following principles in our program:

* In following Montessori's concern for each student's freedom of choice, we are guided by a deep respect for each student's individual process of development.

* Because Montessori emphasized each learner's active participation, this course focuses on the active participation of each student through such opportunities as written assignments, illustrated teaching manuals, peer demonstrations, evaluations, and material making.

* Dr. Montessori felt that the process of development was much more important than the end product. Therefore, we foster an atmosphere of positive cooperation among all the individuals involved in the program. To implement this belief, we include closely supervised self-evaluation, constructive criticism, and emphasis on objective evaluation.
